Thus the grand object of Sherman in burning Atlanta and undertaking a march of hundreds of miles through hosdarer who chooses to dub himself rebel; ness. He has left desolution and destruction behind him, and has borne off with him thousands of able-bodied negroes to six to absolutely none at all, although our fight for the United States instead of working for the Southern Confideracy. He has his therefrom, has greatly increased has cut the rebellion completely in two, at least for the time, by the entire destruction of its railroad system, so thorough and complete, that communication cannot be reestablished until spring. He has opened up the port of Savannah and the large and fertile district surrounding it, to commerce and cotton-cultivation under the Federal flag. More than all, and better than all, he has established himself on the Atlantic, with a convenient base for ope-the border kept in time of peace. The rating against Charleston, and within easy great length of coast to be guarded, and and speedy communication with Grant.

These are some of the grand results of throughout its entire length, demand the most unpeasing vigilance. We are therefore rejoiced to see that Congress has taken such prompt action to restore our revenue were achieved, almost, without the loss of a single man or munition of war. We clency. have not yet received details of the capture of Savannah, which was probably attended with some loss. But it is a remarkable fact, exhibiting most clearly the weakness of the Confederacy, that during the whole march, Sherman was not once opposed by any organized force, and that the only fighting has been done in those fugacious skirmishes in which Wheeler's cavalry has been driven by Kilpstrick.

Under these circumstances we are at full liberty to rejoice over this great success of Sherman as one of the most bril-Hant in conception, and successful in accomplishment, of the whole war. Let us all unite in the shout "Hurrah for Shermun and his gallant soldiers!"
